DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

1. Claims 1-10 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by James (GB Patent #2070139A).

a. For Claims 1-3, figure 2 of James '139 teaches a main flow chamber (5) that has a first air inlet with a constant flow cross-section between outer points (7 and 8) and a second air inlet (15) that is connected to and radial the main flow channel (5).

b. For Claims 4 and 5, figures 2 and 3 teach the change in the cross-sectional flow of the second inlet (15) by the movement of a moveable element (11) around an axis (13a).

c. For Claims 6, 8, and 9, page 3, lines 13-22 teaches, "Any suitable means can be utilized for opening and closing the door 11. although none is shown in the drawings, examples of such suitable means are a spring arrangement, whereby the door 11 automatically opens when the pressure of its lower side exceeds the bias of the springs, and a hydraulic or electrically operated actuator, whereby the door 11 is opened when a preselected parameter, such as angle of attach, has been exceeded.”

d. For Claim 7, page 4, lines 25-27 teaches, “If desired, the door 11 can be constructed so as to open during take-off in order to augment the supply of air to the engine.” Therefore the flaps can be designed to be in an opened or closed position depending on the specifications of the engine.

e. For Claim 10, figure 3 teaches the ambient air being supplied during flight by means of the first air inlet (area between points 7 and 8). Page 1, lines 124-129 and page 2, lines 1-3 teach, “Another problem is encountered with inlets during take-off. In view of the fact that an inlet for a supersonic aircraft is ordinarily designed to control shock wave patterns and to reduce the velocity of the air within it, the volume of air flowing through the inlet at the very low speeds during take-off is often insufficient to achieve required engine thrust levels.” and page 4, lines 25-27 teaches, “If desired, the door 11 can be constructed so as to open during take-off in order to augment the supply of air to the engine.”

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. See PTO-892.
